she strongly adheres to the principles of giving, which are fundamental to her philanthropic philosophy. Two key principles she lives by are "Givers never lack" and "If you can't share from the little you have, you won't share from having more." These principles reflect her deep belief in the abundance mindset and the importance of generosity, regardless of one's circumstances.

1 "Givers never lack":

This principle embodies the belief that giving is not a zero-sum game. Instead, it recognizes that generosity and abundance go hand in hand. She firmly believes that by giving selflessly and with an open heart, one creates a positive flow of resources, opportunities, and blessings in return. She trusts that the act of giving will ultimately bring about personal fulfillment, growth, and abundance in various forms.

2. "If you can't share from the little you have, you won't share from having more": This principle emphasizes the significance of cultivating a spirit of generosity regardless of one's current resources. She recognizes that the capacity to give is not solely determined by wealth or material possessions. Instead, it is rooted in one's willingness to share, help, and make a positive impact, even if the resources at hand are limited. She believes that the act of giving, no matter how small, carries profound meaning and has the potential to create a domino effect of positive transformation.

mama Atalaku

These principles reflect Mama Atalaku's passion and belief that giving is not solely about monetary donations but encompasses acts of kindness, compassion, and support. She encourages individuals to embrace a mindset of abundance, recognizing that even a small act of giving can make a significant difference in someone else's life.

By embodying these principles in her own life, she serves as an inspiration to others, encouraging them to embrace the transformative power of giving, regardless of their circumstances. She believes that through acts of generosity, individuals can contribute to a more compassionate and equitable society. Mrs Epie actively encourages the mindset of giving to the needy without expecting anything in return through her own actions, advocacy, and the establishment of a supportive philanthropic framework. Here are some ways she fosters this mindset:

1. Leading by Example: she understands that actions speak louder than words. She consistently demonstrates her commitment to giving selflessly by actively engaging in philanthropic endeavors and personally contributing to the causes she supports. By leading by example, she inspires others to embrace the mindset of giving without expecting anything in return.

2. Storytelling and Personal Connection: she shares stories and personal experiences to humanize the individuals and communities she supports. By highlighting the challenges faced by those in need and showcasing the positive impact of giving, she creates empathy and encourages others to consider the importance of selfless giving.

3. Empathy and Compassion: she emphasizes the significance of empathy and compassion in understanding the struggles of others. She encourages individuals to put themselves in the shoes of those less fortunate and recognize the power of giving as a means to alleviate suffering and improve lives. By fostering empathy, she cultivates a genuine concern for the well-being of others, transcending the expectation of receiving something in return.

4. Recognition of Joy in Giving: she emphasizes the intrinsic joy and fulfillment that comes from giving without expecting anything in return. She highlights the emotional and spiritual rewards that accompany acts of generosity, encouraging individuals to shift their focus from personal gain to the positive impact they can make in the lives of others.

By encouraging others to give without expectation, she aims to create a culture of selflessness and generosity that transcends personal gain and focuses on the greater good of society.

As a philanthropist, Mama Atalaku says she understands that not everyone may be supportive of her generous personality or philanthropic endeavors. Here are some ways she handles such situations:

1. Respectful Dialogue: she approaches differing opinions with respect and open-mindedness. By highlighting the outcomes and the lives that have been positively affected, she strives to demonstrate the value and effectiveness of her generosity. This approach she says may help address skepticism or doubts from those who are not initially supportive.

Mama Atalaku approaches these situations with grace, understanding, and a commitment to her philanthropic mission, striving to create positive change despite any opposition she may encounter.

Sickle cell disease is not a life's journey i would have chosen, but it has shaped me into a fighter and given me a unique perspective on life. sickle cell is just one chapter of my life, the journey is far from over.

~Nora Brown~

NORA E. E. MOLONGWE

THE SICKLE CELL GODDESS

THE REMARKABLE TALE OF A SICKLE CELL WARRIOR WHO TRANSCENDS LIFE EXPECTATIONS

In a world where sickle cell disease poses numerous challenges to those affected by it, there is a remarkable Cameroonian woman named Nora E E Molongwe. Popularly known as Nora Brown. She's a graduate in computer sciences and information systems from the Atlantic International University USA. Nora is a vibrant and courageous lady who was diagnosed with sickle cell disease at a young age. Despite the obstacles and limitations imposed by her condition, she defied the odds and has surpassed the expected age limit for carriers.

From an early age, Nora recognized the impact that sickle cell disease has on her life and the lives of countless others. She has witnessed the pain, suffering, and misconceptions surrounding the condition. Rather than succumbing to despair, Nora as a sickle cell warrior made a conscious decision to dedicate her life to becoming a sickle cell advocate, a symbol of hope and proof that one could break the belief that sickle cell disease dictated a limited existence.

Nora founded EMELI'S SMILE SICKLE CELL FOUNDATION in May 2018 and she continues to use her online platforms to demystify sickle cell in changing the narratives and perceptions of people living with sickle cell disease; using her undiluted life challenges as a point of reference.

She does her yearly online campaigns with 'Break The Sickle Cycle' and in 2018 year she added the tag " 'SwagUp4SickleCell' – making warriors understand that sickle cell shouldn't be a barrier for you looking good as anyone can be a model" –Nora Brown Talks Nora's campaigns have been a great success as she uses red and black to encourages others to join in.

She is excited seeing how great it has been so as more celebrities in the community are also joining their voices with her to create awareness and help warriors.

Nora is delighted as Emeli's Smile Sickle Cell Foundation (ESSICFO) is making great progress since its creation. The foundation was officially launched on the 29th September 2018, in an event that took place in London. When Zamani noticed a significant decrease in engagement, he investigated the possibility of being shadowbanned by analyzing his blog's statistics, social media reach, and overall performance. He seeks to confirm whether the decline in engagement is indeed due to a shadowban or other factors.

2. Content Evaluation: He uses the period of low engagement as an opportunity to evaluate his content strategy. He reviews his recent posts, analyzes the topics, formats, and styles that have resonated well with his audience in the past, and seeks to identify any potential shortcomings or areas for improvement.

“ Blogging is not jus about writing great content but also about building a great community”

“ Blogging is a platform where you can express yourself and connect with likeminded individuals

“ Blogging is a great way to share knowledge, connect with others, and establish yourself as an expert in your field

3. Diversification of Platforms: To mitigate the impact of a shadowban on a particular platform, he diversified his online presence. He actively engaged with his audience on multiple platforms, such as social media channels, or even guest blogging on other established platforms. This ensured that he has alternative avenues to reach and connect with his followers.

4. Quality Over Quantity: During the shadowbanned phase, he focuses on maintaining the quality of his content rather than succumbing to the pressure of producing more content. He devotes extra time and effort to crafting exceptional pieces that captivate and resonate with his audience, even if the frequency of his posts decreases temporarily.

5. Collaboration Opportunities: Zamani leveraged the power of collaboration during low engagement periods. He sought opportunities to collaborate with other content creators, influencers, or industry experts. By cross-promoting each other's work, he expands his reach and taps into new audiences, potentially gaining new followers and revitalizing engagement.

6. Adaptation and Experimentation: Zamani remains adaptable to changes in the digital landscape.
